In this edition:
Time to Can
Georgia CA$H
New Publications

Time to Can
For home canners, this is the time of year to plan ahead and prepare. Get your equipment and supplies out and inspect them so you are ready when the crops are. For those wanting to learn more about home canning and preservation, consumers can find answers from the National Center for Home Food Preservation.

Georgia CA$H
The U.S. personal saving rate has declined over the past quarter century and now sits at a historically low level. To help consumers make the change from spender to saver, FACS has a new initiative. Georgia Consumers Acquiring Saving Habits encourages participants to focus on one or more of seven saving habits. Contact a FACS agent to enroll.

Information Sharing. FACS Publications can be downloaded and/or printed and given to clientele or highlighted on your county web page.

Preserving Food: Jams and Jellies New!
Preserving Food: Canning Tomatoes and Tomato Products New!
Preserving Food: Canning Fruit New!
Preserving Food: Canning Vegetables New!

Did you know ...

After participating in a program on reducing household energy use, consumers are more likely to adopt energy efficient practices and choose energy efficient products. These practices lead to reduced household energy costs, which benefits the community by reducing contributions to greenhouse gases, lowering the demand for oil imports and extends the availability of non-renewable resources.